Things Happen for a Reason.....

It is a rare occasion to be in the company of someone who does what they love for a living. Their passion for their work exudes from them and allows other around them to become excited and enveloped in the process. By chance and coincidence we were allowed into this arena. After perusing through the “fast food” jewelry outlets and being left with an empty and dissatisfied taste, we sought other avenues. Three conversations with friends then resulted in three phone calls. The third call was to Jaime. With startling professionalism he explained his method and we then set up a comfortable time at a comfortable place – our home. On time and prepared he arrived. From an hour and a half conversation and a glass of wine we embarked on our adventure. The excitement of the ring gained all along the way, and we knew that whatever the end product was - it was truly made – not from a “30 second commercial” approach but one of time, love and giftedness of craft. From a person who had disliked jewelry and never owned a piece, to acquiring an engagement ring that produced an emotional denouement of tears for me and my fiancé was a spectacular journey. We have now gained a piece of art for our family and family of friends in the Enríquez’.

Jamie you are doing what you have been sent to do, thank you for your courage to continue and your love you put into every piece.
